

S.J. PHILLIPS

19th century diamond tremblant hanging spray of flowers brooch, Vever, Paris c.1860, possibly a variety of campanula, designed as a trailing S curve stem set along supporting graduated flowerheads, three mounted en tremblant, each with five, six and seven pointed leafy-petals and with single stone to centre, the diamonds of cushion and old brilliant cut, the lower section articulated on a pendant loop and detachable for wear as two separate brooches, the larger one with the tremblant flowers, open set in silver and gold, signed 'VEVER' and with French assaymarks

Length overall 21cm / 8¼"

Length of longer separate brooch 14cm / 5½"

Length of shorter brooch section 8cm / 3¼"

Weight: 53.6g