S.J. PHILLIPS

19th century diamond floral spray brooch, c.1860, naturalistically modelled with a single principal flowerhead and variously sized buds around, the five petal bloom in the form of a stylised dog rose, a large cushion cut diamond of approximately 1.80ct forming the raised stamen, with two diamond borders, one of spaced accent stones and one below of small cushion cuts, the flowerhead to a blousy cartouche shaped surround of the various bell shaped buds and curling serrated leaves, all from a single cut-stem, open collet set throughout with variously sized cushion cut diamonds, mounted in silver and gold Width 5.3cm / 2 1/8"

Height 4.6cm / 1 7/8"
Weight: 18.5g