S.J. PHILLIPS

Early 20th century guilloche enamel, ruby and diamond pendant watch and pearl and diamond sautoir necklace by Cartier, Paris c.1905, the round pendant watch with reverse cover of engine turned radiating sunrays below a steel-blue guilloche to a central rose cut diamond flowerhead cluster, rose diamond bezel, the watch opposite with engine turned silvered dial, black enamel Arabic hour numerals, minute bar markers, blued steel hands and signed 'CARTIER PARIS'. enamel border and rose diamond bezel, rose diamond winder, the outside rim featuring a channel of calibre cut rubies, the rose diamonds of the bezel and rubies of the outer rim extending up in strapwork fashion to form a circular suspension ring. upon a rose diamond oval bale, hung on a two-row ladder style lariat necklace of small pearls and platinum chain links, spaced by single stone diamond collets and diamond flowerhead clusters, rose diamond scroll-bar terminals, these diamonds all millegrain set, the hinged suspension clasp to the watch-pendant opening on a pull-up roundel and marked 'BREVETE SGDG', the back clasp a simple bolt ring, serial numbered to two scroll bar terminals 3890, the watch mounted in platinum and 18ct yellow gold, the inside of the case numbered 2894 and 6769 and with partial French assymark (eagles' head), the jewelled movement unsigned

Diameter of watch 3cm / 1 3/16"

Length of necklace

Weight: 43g